ABOUT STACY

Stacy Bernal is a Recovering Nobody. After a lifetime of mistakes and mediocrity, her life turned around after she crossed the finish line of her first marathon in 2009. From that day on, she found ways to discover her own Inner Badass and is today passionate about helping others find theirs. From trailer park trash to rising from the ash, Stacy believes everyone possesses greatness and some people need a little help tapping into theirs.

Stacy wants to create ripple effects of positive change, empowering people to live their best and most authentic lives. Whether you hire her for your next event as a kickass keynote speaker, treat your team to one of her engaging workshops, or want to work with her for one-on-one coaching, Stacy will provide the tools for you and your audience to leave feeling inspired, fired up and ready to slay your own dragons.

Stacy has been featured on HuffPost, IdeaMensch, Thrive Global, Chicago Now, Scary Mommy, Autism Parenting Magazine, and HER Magazine. She recently published her first book, The Things We Don't Talk About: A Memoir of Hardships, Healing, and Hope. She contributed to Own the Microphone: How 50 of the World's Best Professional Speakers Launched Their Careers (and You Can, Too!). From once-a-bartender to now-a-board-member, she feels purposeful about sharing her message of triumph, inspiration, and empowerment.
